

Osborne Clarke
Telecoms Seminar Programme 2017

Welcome to our telecoms sector seminars.

As part of the Osborne Clarke firmwide seminar programme, we are running five telecom specific seminars.

After last year's very successful series of seminars on the internet of things, we have decided to repeat the format and run a series of connected seminars on net neutrality this year.

I am looking forward to hearing some really interesting presentations and to participating in the ensuing debates which are always enlightening and often entertaining. I hope that you will find our programme of seminars useful and will be able to join us during the year.

For further information on our full seminar programme, please contact events.calendar@osborneclarke.com

Net neutrality: a regulator's perspective

An overview of net neutrality from a regulator's perspective. How to achieve the right balance between the open internet and fair competition? How well is Ofcom implementing the BEREC guidelines? Does Brexit allow the UK to be different? What impact will 5G have?

London: 15 March
2 hours

Net neutrality: an operator's perspective

An overview of net neutrality from an operator's perspective. How do you get the right balance? Are specialised services the way forward? Can you ever have zero rating? What impact will 5G have?

London: 6 April
2 hours

Net neutrality: the user's perspective

An overview of net neutrality from a user's perspective. Does net neutrality go far enough? How do you get the right balance? Are specialised services needed? Can you ever have zero rating? What impact will 5G have?

London: 11 May
2 hours

Ofcom consultations round up

A seminar examining Ofcom's latest position in relation to the consultations on changes to the general conditions of entitlement and automatic numbering. We are delighted that Ed Leighton of Ofcom will lead this afternoon seminar, which will provide an overview of the responses to the consultations, Ofcom's response and an opportunity to ask questions of Ofcom and be followed by drinks and networking.

London: 31 May
3 hours

Annual telecoms review

Our annual review of developments in telecoms law and regulation. We will look at what has happened in the last twelve months and what is in the pipeline in the UK and the EU.

London: 12 October
3 hours

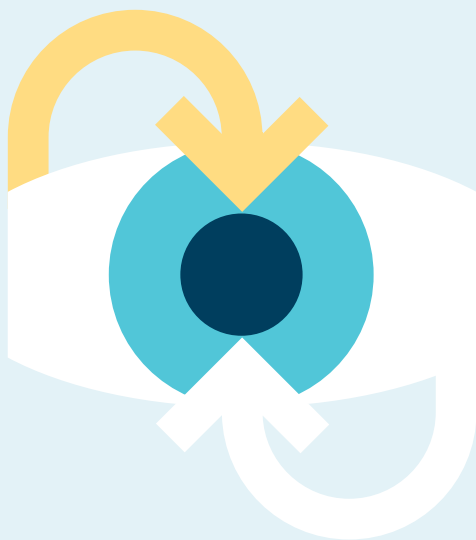

The Solicitors Regulation Authority recognises that a broad range of learning, development and knowledge acquisition helps to improve competence. For more details, please visit the SRA website: www.sra.org.uk
